

Brahm, Elizabeth

McConnellsburg Methodist

Brahm, Elizabeth

DEATH OF AN ESTIMABLE LADY.—Once again has the unseen messenger entered our midst and borne across the silent river, one of our most respected citizens. During the still watches of last Monday night, the spirit of Mrs. Elizabeth Brahm, of this place, waited its flight to another and a better world, where "The wicked cease from troubling and there the weary be at rest. Too high praise cannot be rendered to the good and noble traits of her Christian character; she lived the life of the righteous and her last end was peace; for a devoted life in her Master's service, she has obtained "an inheritance which is uncorruptible, undefiled and that fadeeth not away." Her example is one worthy of imitation by both old and young, and it is sure to be followed by future blessedness.

14 MAY 1885 PAPER

1811-1885

wife of Budeen